

Dr. Candace Hastings is the director of the Texas A&M University Writing Center, where she supervises daily operations, including hiring and training writing consultants. Her passion is working with graduate students trying to write theses and dissertations by running dissertation writing workshops and facilitating graduate student writing groups. Executive Director Valerie Balester jokingly calls her “the dissertation whisperer.” Prior to her arrival at A&M, she served as the dean of distance education at Blinn College where she developed the program from the ground up. Before moving into administration, she taught undergraduate composition and literature courses for twenty years at community colleges in both wired and unwired environments. In addition, she is a visiting lecturer at Texas A&M University in the department of Educational Administration & Human Resource Development. Her research interests include writing centers, academic integrity, and faculty development. As Candace Schaefer, she is the co-author of the Creative Writing Guide, published by Longman. She is currently working on a research project with the writing centers at Michigan, Michigan State, and Ohio State, using corpus analysis to analyze writing center session notes. The project received an International Writing Centers Association research grant in the summer of 2018.
